Parents enthusiasm "infectious" says Board

Russell Kronick responds to a question at the highly-enthusiastic meeting of parents of Hillel Academy and the Talmud Torah Afternoon School held at St. Joseph High School at 881 Broadway on Oct. 31. Almost 300 came to tour the facility and listen to details of the proposed purchase. Initial responses were extremely positive say school officials who are out soliciting contributions to demonstrate the support needed to exercise the option before Dec. 6.

Heads UJA Public Servants

The appointment of Philip Pinkus as Chairman of the Public Service Division of the 1983 United Jewish Appeal and Israel Special Fund and an Associate Chairman of the overall Campaign has been announced by General Chairman, Irving Taylor.

Formed in 1954, the Public Service Division has grown in size and prestige in the intervening years. It has captured the interest of a wide cross section of Jewish public servants in Ottawa and last year raised more than $160,000 from 650 individual contributors.

Mr. Pinkus and his Associate Chairmen Geraldine Goldstein, Joseph Loomer, Larry Sperling and Lawrence Zinman have been planning the 1983 effort which includes a Campaign Strategy Conference for departmental chairmen and canvassers. In addition, the Special Names Group will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Cohen on Monday, November 22. Israeli Ambassador Yeshayahu Anug will be the guest speaker.

A native of Toronto, Mr. Pinkus has resided in Ottawa since 1961, with his wife Wilma. They have three sons. He is a chartered accountant and is presently with National Revenue Taxation as Director of Provincial and International Relations.

Philip Pinkus served on the Board of Directors of the Ottawa Modern Jewish School and is a member of Agudath Israel Congregation. During the 1982 Campaign he was Associate Chairman of the Public Service Division.

This year arrangements are being made to enable contributors to pay their pledges through the services of the Civil Service. A number of other innovations are being planned and Mr. Pinkus is looking forward to the challenge of the coming year with interest and enthusiasm.

U.J.A. support critical

Agencies on bare budgets

The money Ottawa's United Jewish Appeal collects and distributes is of vital importance to the entire Jewish community. Over $600,000 is to go to local Jewish institutions and services this year (not including Jewish schools) and community leaders say they simply could not function without UJA support.

"We all benefit directly or indirectly from UJA recipient agencies," says Jewish Community Council President Joseph Lieff. "Organizations in Ottawa have trimmed their budgets to the bone — we know there's a recession — so the money they receive from us is not just important, it is vital."

This year, the goal of the regular campaign is to raise $2,500,000 for local, national and Israel-based UJA programs. In addition, another 50 per cent of that amount, $1,250,000 is needed to meet emergency social welfare costs in Israel, following the Lebanon war.

These multi-million dollar numbers might dwarf the few thousand dollars required for Camp B'nai B'rith and Camp Gesher scholarships, or to maintain the Ottawa Vaad Hakashruth. But, without UJA support, their essential services would be cut or eliminated as would be the work at major institutions such as the Jewish Community Centre or Hillel Lodge.

Here is a summary of some of the major local UJA recipients.

Jewish Community Centre

JCC executive director Ron Boro puts it this way: "Without UJA support, there wouldn't be a Jewish Community Centre." The JCC is, of course, the home for numerous Jewish organization and the focal point for social, recreational, cultural, educational and physical fitness programs.

The UJA will provide more than $235,000 to the JCC in 1982-83. That is the same allocation as for last year, showing how severe the cost-cutting measures are. UJA support accounts for about one-third the total JCC budget.

"In the past three years, we've offered a greater diversity of programs and services for all age groups, as a result of increased volunteer involvement," said Boro. In addition, professionalism has continued to increase among the staff.

The JCC is a voluntary non-profit organization, whose operations are administered by a 27-member Board of Directors.

Vaad Report

by Joseph Lief

President, Ottawa Vaad Ha'Ir
Jewish Community Council

Where There's A Will, There's A Way!

It was a sight to see. More than 300 parents and their children responded to an invitation from the Talmud Torah Board to tour St. Joseph High School on Broadview Avenue last Sunday morning. The news that we had taken an option on the building had swept the community and there was a great deal of excitement in the air as people crowded in to see the facilities for themselves.

They were not disappointed. With members of the Committee acting as guides, individual groups were taken into the spacious classrooms and well-equipped labs, library and cafeteria. They saw the outdoor playing fields and finally ended up in the gymnasium where Russell Kronick gave a thorough briefing on the terms of the agreement negotiated by Sol Shinder and called on them to demonstrate their backing for the project with commitments payable over a five year period.

Almost thirty parents, visibly moved by what they had seen and heard, came forward voluntarily with handsome contributions. The rest will be seen over the course of the next three weeks. The issue of whether or not to exercise the option is to be dealt with by the Board of Trustees of the Council on November 24. The way in which parents of Hillel Academy and the Talmud Torah Afternoon School students respond will go a long way in influencing the decision of the Trustees.

The availability of St. Joseph High School came at a time when we were about to launch the 1983 United Jewish Appeal and Israel Special Fund. That has to be our first priority. At the same time, the building is just too good to pass up. Hence, the demonstration of parental support now with the wider community appeal in the early spring.

I believe we have the capacity and the will to do both. Together, we can make it happen.

Matti Golan on the media

By Hope Dempsey

For Israeli journalist Matti Golan, the basic issues and realities of the Middle East are being ignored by the western media.

The managing editor of the Israeli newspaper Haaretz and Israeli journalist for the past 15 years, was in Ottawa October 24 as part of his North American visit to meet with members of the western press. He was here to meet with editors, diplomatic correspondents and journalists who report on the Middle East, to discuss the coverage of the war in Lebanon.

"The basic realities in the Middle East are non-partisan realities," said Mr. Golan.

"There are two sides in the Middle East, the Jews and the Arabs. The Israeli side maintains that whatever differences exist, Israel wants to sit down and discuss them. The Arabs want their views accepted and then they will negotiate."

In a press conference with the local media, Mr. Golan said that the western press is missing the real issue; the Iran-Iraq war.

"The Iran-Iraq war and who will control the Persian Gulf is the issue which will lead to peace in the Middle East," said Mr. Golan.

"I'm trying to make the press realize that the real issue is who wants to make peace and who doesn't."

In his address to more than 100 members of the Jewish community, Mr. Golan explained that what Israel presents is a policy and that what the Arabs present is a pre-condition.

"Israel is saying that everything is negotiable," said Mr. Golan.

"The Arabs are saying that nothing is negotiable, they want all of it. After they get everything they want, they will be willing to come to the negotiating table. This is the basic issue."

Mr. Golan went on to say that the situation in the Middle East becomes different when an Arab leader wants to make peace. He referred to the fact that Menachem Begin once said that he would never give up the Sinai, but for the sake of peace he was forced to. And he may be forced to give up other land in the future.

"We all must be able to change our views because of changing circumstances," said Mr. Golan.

"The word 'never' means only for now."

Mr. Golan pointed out that pressure from the governments and media of the western world has been on Israel and that this pressure should now be placed on the Arab nations to negotiate.

"The pressure should be put on the Arabs to moderate their views and policies without pre-conditions," said Mr. Golan.

"If the Arabs will go the negotiating table, the heart of the problems can be reached and an agreement between Israel and the Arabs will emerge."

By talking to the western press, Matti Golan is trying to make them realize that the recent reporting on the Middle East has been biased journalism.

Plain Talk

By Irving Taylor

General Chairman,
1983 Campaign

Some years ago, my predecessors in office thought it would be a good idea for the General Chairman to write a column. I am following that tradition. The object was and still is to use this space to tell the U.J.A. story and the personalities in our community who make it work. Each man has his own style; mine will be to keep it short and to the point. I will, of course, welcome your questions, comments and suggestions.

Back in July, the Vaad, in consultation with our major donors, decided against a separate Emergency Campaign. We concluded instead that we would advance the 1983 United Jewish Appeal to November 1 and combine it with the Israel Special Fund. State of Israel Bonds co-operated and here we are. Commitments are being accepted now ... payment can be deferred to the new year for tax purposes.

The goal is $2,500,000, for the Regular Campaign plus $1,250,000, for the Israel Special Fund. There is no fat in our agency budgets — these are bare minimums needed for programs and services in Ottawa, in Canada and in Israel.

To reach the objective, donors are being asked to repeat their 1982 contributions or do better if possible and then add 50% of the 1982 figure for the Israel Special Fund. It's still too early to judge the outcome of the appeal, but I am highly encouraged by the favourable reaction to the formula and the way it is being met all the way down the line.

I consider myself fortunate that I was able to attract top-notch people to the senior positions in the campaign, notably Stephen Victor, my Deputy Chairman; Simone Goldberg, Chairman of the Women's Division; and Philip Pinkus, Chairman of the Public Service Division. With their help, we have put together a first-rate team. This blending of new and old is having a decided impact on our results.

Last Saturday night, we launched the campaign with a buffet dinner for major donors at the home of Mrs. Gilbert Greenberg. His Excellency Meir Rosenne, Israel's Ambassador to France was our guest speaker. He gave a powerful address which was well-received by the receptive audience. The results were heartening and I want to thank Irving Greenberg and Norman Zagerman, Co-Chairmen of our Major Gifts Committee for their leadership and input. All in all, it was an auspicious beginning and I am most appreciative to Bess Greenberg for her gracious hospitality.

The month of November is filled to capacity with fund-raising functions in all divisions of the campaign. This year we are placing heavy emphasis on parlour meetings where all of the components in the campaign can be explained and discussed. 1983 is a special year and we have to be able to tell the story face-to-face if it is to be understood properly. The group dynamics of these gatherings is a vital ingredient in the process. It is important that you attend the parlour meetings to which you are invited since you are central to their success.

Middle East is so outrageous," said Mr. Golan.

"Even the people in Israel who are not Begin supporters have been outraged. What journalists are reporting should be objective and they should always have in mind what the real issues are."

"The western press are prejudiced against Prime Minister Begin and they have let this affect their reporting," said Mr. Golan. "The press is looking for proof of their objections to the war and they have judged the war, before the outcome."

Mr. Golan emphasizing that he is not a supporter of the Begin government, said that the Jewish people cannot accept the notion that the whole world is against Israel. According to Mr. Golan, Israel does have a lot of friends and for the Jews to sit back and do nothing is detrimental.

"We must go and talk to people and to examine ourselves, and see that the way in which we have been represented has been wrong," said Mr. Golan.

"The western press must stop looking at the Middle East in black and white terms," said Mr. Golan. "The Middle East is grey and journalists must look at the issues."

Commentary by Cynthia Engel Editor

Our November 5 edition marks the third appearance of a new column dealing with the Middle East. Appropriately entitled "The Middle East: Fact & Fiction," this excellent bit of journalistic endeavour will be, we are happy to report, a regular feature in every issue of the Bulletin. The feedback from our readers has been decidedly enthusiastic and a formal introduction to the hard-writing, hard-researching author of these pieces is definitely in order.

M.J. Kalin, you are about to be unmasked!

Meyer Kalin, 32, is a native Ottawan. The son of Lea and Isadore Kalin, Meyer credits his parents with instilling in him a deep and abiding love for Israel. Active in the Hahonim movement in his youth, his feeling for Zionism was firmly cemented when, at twenty years of age, he first visited Israel.

A freelance accountant by vocation, in January of 1980, Meyer suddenly found himself with an avocation: writing — specifically letters to the editor in defense of Israel. In the ensuing two and a half years he has had the satisfaction of seeing almost sixty of his letters published. (No mean feat, as anyone who has ever dashed off like correspondence knows only too well.) M.J. Kalin's letters have graced the editorial pages of The Gazette, The Globe and Mail, The Citizen, The Journal and The Washington Post.

Although very much involved with his accounting practice, Meyer hopes his column on our pages will lead to big things in the area of writing. In addition to this commitment, he is currently at work on a book entitled "Media and The Middle East: A Guide to Effective Response" which he is co-authoring with Jeff Bien, a former editor of the Bulletin.

Meyer Kalin has a brother Zev and a sister, Rena.

Last April 2 with no fanfare, no word of explanation, into our regular mailing of the Bulletin we slipped the first edition of L'Chayim, a newspaper painstakingly and well-edited and produced by a group of students at Carleton and Ottawa Universities. The second issue accompanies this paper — with background history!

In the fall of 1981 Ari Elieff, a Edmontonian and then second-year journalism student at Carleton, with his wife Chaya attended a Network (the National Association of Jewish Students Union) Convention in Los Angeles. The couple brought back the idea of a Jewish students newspaper and L'Chayim was born. Its editor is Sean Fine, a 22-year-old Torontonian, presently in his final year of Journalism at Carleton. (And yes, he's related to the Ottawa Fines!)

Putting out a newspaper is no easy task at the best of times and when one is a student, with all its attendant responsibilities, the difficulties are infinitely compounded. If nothing else, Sean admits he and his crew have learned a newspaper is put together "with lots of Scotch tape — and tears!"

However, Editor Fine has successfully managed to coordinate his staff of reporters (most of whom are journalism students), photographers (Ottawa U. students) and the paste-up brigade. Everything comes together, miraculously in the Centretown News Office granted to them by Carleton.

L'Chayim, Volume I was thoroughly enjoyed by our readers in April. We are pleased to include Volume II with this issue of the Bulletin.

Harry Hecht

Harry Hecht to get award

Harry Hecht, of Congregation Machzikei Hadas, will receive the National Funeral Standards Award at the Awards Luncheon Banquet on Sunday, November 28, at the 84th Anniversary National Convention of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America (the Orthodox Union).

Mr. Hecht, head of the synagogue's cemetery committee and a member of the community's Chevra Kadisha (burial society), is also responsible for the maintenance of the synagogue's cemetery area.

According to Rabbi Joseph Karasick, Chairman of the Convention Awards Committee, "In an area where the dictates of halacha (Jewish Law) must be scrupulously enforced, Mr. Hecht has shown himself to be a devoted and trustworthy guardian. We are pleased to have the opportunity to recognize his contribution to his community and to Yiddishkeit in general."

The Convention, to be held on American Thanksgiving weekend, November 25-28, is the Orthodox Union's biennial gathering of its members and friends — both rabbinic and lay — who will meet to discuss and resolve issues of vital interest to the Jewish community. At the Convention, new national officers will be elected, and delegates will debate and help establish the Orthodox Union's priorities and policies for the immediate and long-range future.

The Convention will be held at the Americana Great Gorge Resort in Vernon Valley, New Jersey, with delegates representing most of the 1,000 member congregations of the Orthodox Union.

Rising rate of inflation

TEL AVIV (JTA) — The cost of living index rose by 7.6 percent in September, the Central Bureau of Statistics announced. During the first nine months of 1982 the index rose by 50 percent. This was the annual rate promised by the Treasury at the end of last year, assuring the public that the Treasury's policies would bring the inflationary rate to "about 90 percent for the year, or well below 100 percent." September's increase indicates that inflation this year will total about 135 percent.

Mashgiach

The Ottawa Vaad Hakashruth provides a mashgiach at Lapoint Fish Ltd. in the Byward Market area every Wednesday morning from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. The community is encouraged to make fish purchases at this time.

A Sleep Full of Dreams by Edna Alford,

Oolichan Books, P.O. Box 10,
Lantzville, B.C. V0R 2T0
Paper, $8.95

Winner of the League of Canadian Poets 1981 Gerald Lampert Award, A Sleep Full of Dreams deals with a universal theme: old age. Further, "with age comes wisdom" is the working premise of this exciting new Canadian author, Edna Alford, in her ten stories probing the mental and physical realities in the lives of residents of Pine Mountain Lodge, an old folks' home in Calgary.

In the persona of Alda Pederson, enthusiastic lodge nurse and narrator of these stories, Alford's fictional edge is her ability to step into the minds and hearts of the people about whom she writes. Alda Pederson is not only a superb professional she is a superb human being.

Though still in her thirties, happily in love and about to be married, she has the sensitivity to see herself or anyone at the inevitable end of life. This sensitivity shapes her own joys and passions as well as her commitment to the old people in the home where she works.

The opening story, "The Hoyer," is brutal, yet one of the most powerful stories in the collection. A hoyer is a contraption used to hold bedridden patients for bathing; its description, the sheer physical problems of its use are shocking. Yet, Alford takes this grotesque apparatus, a lodge resident, Miss Bole (who is a physical wreck) and ably squeezes dignity out of a horrendous bath routine.

A second story emphasizing the spiritual space of the aged is "Mid-May's Eldest Child." Here, a retired teacher, Miss Moss, who taught English for forty six years teaches Arla a lesson. It's Spring and Arla is feeling especially free. She wants to share her feelings with Miss Moss so she plans an outing for the old woman. "It would have to be on the sly, of course, so the matrons wouldn't get wind of it, but Miss Moss would get a kick out of that — putting one over on them." On the way out of the lodge, they pass several residents planted in front of the T.V. "Watching T.V. seemed to be all they did."

Once free of the lodge, Miss Bole gets crotchety and wants to go back. Arla tries to prolong the trip, urging the old woman to enjoy the flowers in a nearby park: "Look, Miss Moss, Mid-May's Eldest Child, the coming of the musk rose. Keats, right?"

But not even the reminder of Miss Moss's favourite poet will stir her to share Spring with Arla. The story closes with lines from Keats, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever/its loveliness increases; it will never/Pass into nothingness; but still will keep/A bower for us and a sleep/Full of sweet dreams and health and quiet breathing."

In the funniest story in the collection, "Half-Past Eight," two women from the lodge have a day on the town at the Calgary Stampede. There's a Bingo story, "Under the I," where Alford surprises her readers by turning the mundane into the mystical. Another story, "Poll 101," speaks to the exploitation of the old, and "The Visitor" speaks to mental infirmity.

Every story in the book has its particular richness. But the thread that holds all the stories together is Alford's respect for the aged. A must for anyone concerned about the aged, either in their own family or the community.

A Sleep Full of Dreams is available in several Ottawa bookstores. The book can also be ordered directly from the publisher.

Gen. Shlomo Gazit to inaugurate group

Ben Gurion University of the Negev President Gen. (res.) Shlomo Gazit will inaugurate the Ottawa Branch of the Canadian Associates on Tuesday, November 16.

General Gazit is the former Chief of Military Intelligence of the Israel Defence Forces (I.D.F.) and a recognized expert in Middle East Affairs.

The Branch will be inaugurated at a Wine and Cheese Reception at the Le Cercle Universitaire d'Ottawa, at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Erwin Koranyi, Chairman of the Organizing Committee, will preside.

Former Bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky will introduce Gen. Gazit, and the Membership Chairperson, Suzannah Dalfen, will acknowledge his address.

In addition to describing Ben Gurion University and its role bridging the national social gap and its efforts in building peace with Egypt, Gen. Gazit is expected to present a political — military analysis of the Middle East situation.

View from the Pulpit

Jews in Crisis

By Rabbi Reuven P. Bulka
Congregation Machzikei Hadas

Over the past few months, the media has saturated us with news and analysis relative to the Middle East situation, and specifically Israel's attempt to liberate Lebanon from the terrorists who have held it hostage for the past number of years.

Of course, the terminology that I employ, "Israel's attempt to liberate Lebanon from the terrorists who have held it hostage for the past number of years," strikes the reader as an odd way of describing what in the public image surely as seen as Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

How one looks at the events of the past few months depends not merely on the facts of the situation, but on how one chooses to interpret the facts, and more importantly, on the choice of facts that one chooses to ignore and one chooses to emphasize.

The facts which cast a negative shadow on the state of Israel have been amply reported. Thus, the mythical view that the Jews control the presses in North America has been literally exploded in the last few months. Anyone who has pent-up anti-Israel or anti-Jewish feelings has been given ample "objective facts" to hide behind and to lambaste the state of Israel, and has used them.

The truth is that Israel did not invade Lebanon in order to take over the country, Israel invaded Lebanon in order to liberate Lebanon from foreign elements, elements which have terrorized the country in a way which the public has been unaware for such a long time and unfortunately, because of selective bias, is still unaware. Where is all the investigative reporting that brought us Watergate and other exposes? Why is there so much silence in this issue?

Why too, have the media refused to project, in honest proportion, the pictures of Lebanese families relieved, even overjoyed at seeing Israelis marching in and ridding them of the pestilence that has afflicted them for the last years?

Let it be said, let it be re-iterated, and let it be re-emphasized that Israel is not fighting against the Palestinians. Hopefully, once the PLO get out totally and terrorism will have been removed from the political scene, Israel can sit down and negotiate a just solution to the Palestinian problem without the involvement of the terrorist element. It is a problem for which the Arab countries must take some measure of responsibility, even the major share, and the mere fact that Israel is willing to sit down and negotiate this item shows not only its good intentions, but its magnanimity of spirit!

But you will not get this from the television, you will not get this from the radio, and you will not get this from the newspapers.

The media stands accused of perhaps the most heinous crime the media can be guilty of, namely cloaking bias in the guise of journalistic objectivity. Just now we are beginning to find out some of the reason for the bias. Everyone wanted to avoid the charge of anti-Jewishness, but the time has come to take the gloves off. One need only read such items as Edward Alexander's recent article, and the spate of anti-Jewish venom that is coming forth from supposedly objective reporters. How objective can the reporters be when, as it turns out, they stayed the entire time of their reporting the Lebanese conflict in the Palestinian sector. They hardly ever stayed over in the Christian sector, and that they should have cultivated or come with a built-in bias is beyond question. This is all reflected in the coverage with which we were bombarded.

Unquestionably not only the report of the war, but also the pasting that Israel took as a result of the massacres in the refugee camps are a direct result of this built-in bias.

Before we can even hope that the world will wake up to the fraud that has been perpetrated, it is absolutely essential that the Jewish community be singularly aware of the facts and fiction in the situation, and have their confidence in the State of Israel, and its sense of responsibility restored. We have been victimized by the media, and that victimization has affected the global Jewish community.

To my mind, the regaining of our self-respect, and our confidence in our brethren and our country, is the foremost imperative of the moment.

Notes for Seniors

By Marlene E. Cherun
Jewish Social Services of Ottawa-Carleton

As I have said before in this column, it is the Volunteers who bring our Agency's programs to life. It is they who share their warmth and their vitality with new immigrants, with seniors, with young people in need of help. Some of our — no, your — volunteers received well-earned recognition at the Jewish Social Services Agency's Annual Meeting, held on October 1, at the Jewish Community Centre.

Two of several volunteers who were honored because of their work with the elderly were Sam Ages and Dorothy Brown. Sam, although a new volunteer, has provided numerous drives to medical appointments for seniors and will also be part of the Meals-on-Wheels program. Dorothy has shown her dedication to the senior community by providing practical assistance for seniors in the form of shopping and by accompanying them to appointments. She has also served as a Friendly Visitor and as a Teleshalom caller. Sam and Dorothy, thank you. We look forward to working with you in the future.

'Strange'huts in backyards

The City of Nepean experienced an unexpected building boom in early October when dozens of strange, thatched huts appeared in the backyards of many of its residents. It was Succoth, of course, and in unprecedented numbers, members of Beth Shalom West undertook one of the more unusual traditions of building and "sitting" in their own Succahs. A highlight of the Festival was a progressive Succah party with close to 150 adults and children going from Succah to Succah to taste various foods, to sing, dance, and to learn about this unique holiday. Under the leadership of Rabbi Michael Orelowitz and the "caterer" of Lynn and Howard Nadler, the afternoon was deemed a "fantastic success."

The festive spirit carried on into Simchat Torah, when Beth Shalom West had its first Simchat Torah party, with Hakafot, dancing, singing, and refreshments.

Beth Shalom West is now holding weekly Friday night and Shabbat services at Sir John A. MacDonald High School, at Greenbank and Baseline Roads. Information about programs, services or membership can be obtained by calling the synagogue office at 232-3501.

Local women attend Biennial Convention

Agudath Israel Congregation will be represented by Cally Kardash, Barbara Farber, Donna Dolansky, Ruth Levitan, Marcelle Ohayon and Flo Morgan at the National Biennial Convention of the Women's League for Conservative Judaism, at the Concord Hotel, Kiamasha Lake, N.Y. from November 14 to 18. The local women will join some 2,000 delegates, representing the 200,000 members of 800 Sisterhoods of Conservative synagogues in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico, and Israel.

"Get Wisdom, Gain Understanding" is the theme of this year's convention which marks the 65th anniversary of Women's League, the largest synagogue women's group in the world. In celebration of the anniversary, the convention will honor the Founding Sisterhoods represented on Women's League's Board of Directors.

“None is Too Many” disturbing chronicle

None is Too Many is a rigorously documented, brilliantly researched account of a shameful period in Canadian history when the country continually ducked chance after chance to save European Jewry from Nazi genocide. It is certain to be one of the most discussed books of the year.

To the condemned Jews of Auschwitz, Canada had a special meaning. It was the name given to the camp barracks where the food, clothes, gold, diamonds, jewellery and other goods taken from prisoners were stored. It represented life, luxury and salvation; it was a Garden of Eden in Hell; it was also unreachable.

In effect, the barracks at Auschwitz symbolized what Canada was to all the Jews of Europe throughout the 1930s and 1940s — a paradise, enormous, wealthy, overflowing and full of life; but out of bounds, a haven totally inaccessible. Why Canada was closed to the Jews of Europe is the subject of an outstanding book written by Professors Irving Abella and Harold Troper, published recently by Lester and Orpen Dennys, Canada. It is a story summed up best in the words of an anonymous senior Canadian official who, in the midst of a rambling, off-the-record discussion with journalists in early 1945, was asked how many Jews would be allowed into Canada after the war. His response, though spontaneous, seems to reflect the prevailing view of a substantial number of his fellow citizens: “None,” he said, “is too many.”

Professors Abella and Troper conclusively demonstrate that in the years 1933-1948, when the Jews of Europe were looking for a place of refuge from Nazi persecution, Canada effectively shut its doors. Out of the millions of refugees, Canada admitted a paltry 5,000. In a world which was decidedly inhospitable to refugees, Canada's record was the worst.

Employing a richness of archival and hitherto unavailable source material — written and oral — Abella and Troper trace the origins and results of Canadian immigration policies towards Jews.

Whether it was Mackenzie King's efforts to placate anti-Semitic Quebec politicians under the guise of national unity, the racist sentiments of Canada's director of immigration, or the flirtation of Canada's high commissioner to London, Vincent Massey, with the pro-German Cliveden set, the forces against admitting Jews to Canada was pervasive, articulate, and inexorable.

Canadian participation in the crisis of European Jewry is set forth in harrowing detail: in the voyage to nowhere of German Jews on the luxury liner St. Louis — “The Voyage of the Damned”; in the sham of the international refugee conferences at Evian and Bermuda; in the attempts to rescue Jewish children from Vichy France; and in the post-war effort to limit the immigration of Holocaust survivors.

THE MIDDLE EAST

FACT & FICTION

M.J. Kalin

We are facing another enigma in the Middle East: Arab peace plans. In 1981, Saudi Crown Prince Fahd presented a plan for "peace" in the region, but it was decidedly vague on Israel's participation in that peace. In fact, Israel was not mentioned by name in the relevant portions of the plan. This summer, an Arab summit conference in Fez, Morocco, put forward yet another plan for peace in the Middle East, one even more vague than the Saudi effort of 1981. The only significant difference was that the 1982 proposal was adopted by the Arab states in attendance at the conference.

At one stroke the Arabs have again succeeded in placing Israel on the diplomatic defensive. Hard on the heels of the Reagan peace plan, this "initiative" has created the illusion that Israel alone is saying NO to peace.

To what extent can these peace efforts be taken seriously? To what degree are they true expressions of Arab heartfelt beliefs? Have the rest of the Arab states finally accepted Egypt's stand that wars are futile and that true peace is the ultimate solution to the Arab-Israeli dispute? Or is this but the latest propaganda ploy aimed at driving a wedge between Israel and her closest friend, the United States?

It is interesting to note that the Arab proposals refuse to name the state of Israel. It is as if the name itself is so distasteful to them that they are incapable of uttering it. It is therefore up to the Western media to interpret Arab pronouncements so that Israel becomes a key player in the schemes of her antagonists. It is also for Western journalists to discern moderation and intent.

A further peculiarity of the Arab peace plans is that they are just now beginning to accept what was offered 40 years ago under vastly different circumstances. (The proposed partition plan for Palestine would have seen an independent Jewish state and Arab Palestinian state in the territory between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean Sea. Jerusalem would have been an international city, and there would have been no war, no refugee problem and no hatreds.) Since that time, the Arabs have made no concessions in the face of new realities. (Probably the only time the Arabs understand the meaning of the word concessions is when it is preceded by the words "we demand Israeli...")

We cannot see any hard evidence of peace, or desires for peace, aside from the lofty ideals that the Arabs are now proclaiming. We see instead, massive spending on armaments to a degree that even outstrips NATO's European members; a strengthened Arab boycott of Israel on both the diplomatic and economic planes; a determined effort to remove Israel from all international forums, the UN agencies, and the General Assembly. The latter effort was abandoned only at the last moment when it appeared that it might actually fail, due to the American threat to withhold funding of UN operations if Israel were expelled.

The Arabs continue their attempt to delegitimize Israel at every opportunity. Like the prolific oil gushers, the hatred and invective continues to pour forth from all official organs and spokesmen for the Arab cause.

If, on the other hand, the Arabs meant what they said about desiring peace, at least they could make some confidence-building gestures to strengthen their case. They might tone down the anti-Israel rhetoric, ease their economic and political strangulation of the Jewish state, and begin talking TO Israel instead of AT her. At the very least, initial steps in these directions would reduce the hostility toward Israel that they have to date induced and encouraged.

While the West hails as breakthroughs the Arabs' new positions, they do not look beyond the verbiage toward the true intent. The adage "actions speak more forcefully than words" rings true. The Egyptians supplemented their statements with good intentions. (Progress toward peace between Egypt and Israel became possible only when Egypt stated unequivocally that it would enter into negotiations without pre-conditions.) Peace and tranquility, if not love and devotion, have marked Egyptian-Israeli relations since 1979. One sign of positive Arab intentions would be rapprochement with Egypt, one which allows for continued peaceful and normal relations with Israel.

The Arabs' statements to the mass media in the West are totally different in nature and tone from those delivered for local consumption. While the presentation to the outside world is one of reasonableness and moderation, statements for the Arab world remain full of vitriol and invective toward Israel, and harken back to the "push them into the sea" rhetoric. (See FOR THE RECORD.) Given that the Arabs are prepared to say one thing to the West and the polar opposite to their own people, one must wonder which is the true face they are presenting. In the end, it is not the Americans or Europeans that must live together in the Middle East, but Arabs and Israelis. If the Arab people are inflamed by domestic rhetoric which is violently anti-Israel, then what prospect is there for true peace between Arab and Jew?

The most likely possibility is that the entire "substance" is an elaborate sham, presented so that the West can attribute "moderation and reasonableness" to their Arab "friends." In this way, increased pressure will be brought to bear on Israel, greater strains will develop between her and the United States, and the Arabs themselves will have to concede little, while ostensibly remaining on the side of "peace and justice." To this extent at least, they are succeeding.

The Arabs' intentions, for the present, therefore, must remain suspect. Until action substantiates their honey-covered words, until we see some concrete evidence of a willingness to live in peace, and a desire to reach that peace through honest bargaining, in good faith, words alone will not be enough. (The specifics of the Fez Peace Plan will be covered in a future column.)

MYTHINFORMATION

If the Arabs are truly bent on peace, they are divulging it in a most contradictory manner. Since 1973 the Arab states of Syria, Iraq, Libya, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, and Egypt have purchased, in total, over $100 billion worth of armaments. This has increased their stockpile of weapons to phenomenal proportions. In some categories they even exceed the levels of weapons possessed by the United States. One must therefore doubt their peaceful intentions.

As can be seen from the chart, Israel barely matches Syria in numbers of weapons. The Arab acquisition of enormous quantities of weaponry, aimed at Israel, explains why Israel must divert such a large proportion of her budget to defence. The Arab charge of "Israeli militarism" rings hollow when one sees the extent of Arab arms purchases and stockpiling. The threat to Israel is all too real.

FOR THE RECORD

King Fahd, author of the much-touted Saudi peace plan of the summer of 1981, and participant in the deliberations leading to the latest comprehensive Arab plan for peace in the Middle East, recently made some clarifying statements on Arab acceptance of Israel. On January 8, 1982, King Fahd addressed a group of students at the Dahrn Institute for Technical Studies. He told them that, "There is no doubt that the day will come when Israel will be finally liquidated... The day will come when Israel will be paralyzed and nobody will be able to help it, even by giving it nuclear weapons."

Much has been made of a "moderate" element in the Palestine Liberation Organization. This alleged moderation has been rewarded by Yasser Arafat's much-publicized personal audience with Pope John Paul II. Moderation is in the eye of the beholder. Yasser Arafat's deputy, Abu Iyad, explained the PLO's official position in an interview with AL-HALIJ in the United Arab Emirates on July 23, 1982:

"The PLO will never recognize Israel's existence. Anyone who talks about recognizing the enemy should have his tongue and his head cut off, because the question of recognition is one of the untouchable topics... Talk about recognition of Israel by Palestinians is nothing but psychological warfare by the Zionist enemy and the United States against Palestinian resistance."

Demonstrations mark Israel's finest hour

By Jim Fain

against killing Israeli women and children.

Israel may be living its finest hour in the aftermath of the Beirut massacre.

Four hundred thousand of its people massed in Tel Aviv to protest Prime Minister Begin's initial refusal to order a judicial inquiry. If a comparable percentage of the U.S. population demonstrated on an issue, we would have 22 million citizens in the streets.

And how has the world learned about the killings in the Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut?

Largely through the Israeli press, one of the freest and most independent anywhere. Israeli newspapers broke most of the stories that revealed the complicity of the Israeli army in permitting Christian Lebanese militia to enter the camps.

How did the Israeli press find out?

Largely from Israeli soldiers who were heartsick at what had happened.

Remember too, that cabinet officers have resigned rather than go along with Begin. That senior army officers have given up their commissions. That much of parliament is on the edge of rebellion.

All of which would be remarkable in any case but is made truly astounding by the situation in which Israel has existed since it won its statehood through the force of its arms and the blood of its people in 1948.

Since then, Israel has fought four major wars to protect its existence. It has lived in a state of siege, surrounded by hostile nations that refuse to recognize or make peace with it.

Its people have fought off terrorist attacks, lived most of their lives with part-time military service as a fixture of their existences, endured staggering inflation and taxation as the price of maintaining their freedom. They have fought off enemies who are insensitive to civilian casualties, who have no compunction

In three wars, the United States, which helps to supply arms and financial assistance to Israel, has stepped in just as Israel was winning and insisted that the Israelis stop before final victory. That happened at the Suez in 1956, in the Six-Day war in 1967 and again in the Golan Heights during the Yom Kippur war of 1973.

Who could blame the Israelis now if they turned a deaf ear to the suffering in Lebanon? They have suffered greatly themselves.

Yet that is not what is happening. Israel and, indeed Jews throughout the world are tragically torn by evidence that the Israeli army command in Lebanon encouraged Christian militiamen to enter the Beirut camps, knowing the thirst for revenge of those militiamen.

Not Menachem Begin, whose view of the world has been narrowed and hardened by his personal suffering and the suffering of his people. He stands intransigent, breathing defiance. But Begin is not Israel, though Israel elected him, in part because of the frustrations of its long search for peace and security.

Israel remains a country that cares, a democracy with soul and conscience. It must wrestle with the problem of Begin as best it can. Its friends will wish it well but cannot be expected to support it when they think it is being wrongly led.

Whether supportive of individual Israeli policies or not, anyone who values decency should applaud the majesty of a people who can endure what the Israelis have gone through and still turn out 10 per cent of their total population to protest a government when they feel it has betrayed their spirit of conscience and humanity. — (c1982).

Labour Zionism: spiritual & human

Organizational Profile III by Mark Buckshon,

The Labour Zionist Movement acknowledges the importance of the worker in our society. Its supporters locally and internationally go a step further, however. They take a spiritual and human commitment — and turn it to tasks useful for the entire Jewish community.

There's an active youth organization, Dror-Habonim, offering fun in an environment of idealism. Members of the two adult Labour Zionist organizations, Pioneer Women Na'amat and the Histadrut League, support a wide range of social service projects here and Israel. On a down-to-earth level, the local Jewish telephone book is published each year by Labour Zionist supporters.

All of these activities are very "establishment" and uncontroversial. Yet local Labour Zionist Council chairman Harry Goldstein remembers more radical days — when the bulk of members were working-class immigrants who questioned the virtues of capitalism and sought a socialist, communally-oriented way of life.

"The Labour Zionist movement in the last 20 years has changed considerably," he said. Before, members "were really the workers." Now, as their children have moved up to the middle class and professions, something has been lost. "You lose that feeling for labour and become sort of wishy-washy," he said.

Certainly, the fiery political discussions of the movement's early-thirties impetus are no more. The original supporters from Russia, Poland and Eastern Czechoslovakia have assimilated into the broader community, many becoming wealthy capitalists themselves. Yet Labour Zionist idealism remains a powerful force here and in Israel. Their political party may have lost power in the ones to demonstrate and demand an inquiry after the recent Beirut Massacre.

"Idealists are very few," Goldstein acknowledges. "Yet, those who are remaining true to the Labour Zionist ideals are still idealists."

These values have appeal to the more than 100 young Jews who gather at the Histadrut Centre on Chatelain Street for Dror-Habonim programs. "We especially emphasize the kibbutz life and communal way of life," explained Habonim co-ordinator Gad Banner. Banner, who is also the Israeli Labour Zionist representative in Ottawa, says social and educational programs are arranged from children from nine years old, with leadership by teens in their late teens and early 20's.

At the other end of the age spectrum is local Histadrut League President Hugo Levendel who is still active in the Jewish community. He is presently the President of the Jewish Historical Society and also works as a freelance translator for the federal government.

Levendel says Histadrut is not as active an organization as it once was. He recalls earlier days, when he led the "Young People's League" in the 1930s, when an interest in Yiddish united a motley assortment of radicals including socialists, anarchists, and left- and right-Poale Zionists. Today, most of the original Ottawa Histadrut members are aging — but Levendel says they still get together for fund-raising and special projects.

The situation, however, for Histadrut's female counterpart — the Pioneer Women's Na'amat — is much more lively. Locally, three groups are active (a fourth holds a more honorary "members-at-large" status) in a wide range of community activities.

Unlike some other Jewish women's groups which have suffered with the increasing number of women entering the paid work force, Pioneer Women has adapted to the new way of things. Council President Freda Frankel says committee chairmanships and other duties are shared, and meetings are scheduled for evenings when members have free time. (Incidentally, Mrs. Frankel is employed herself — at the Jewish Community Centre.)

Mrs. Frankel says about 115 women belong to the Ottawa groups. Nationally, there are 3,000 supporters and she says Pioneer Women is the largest organization of its kind in Israel — counting 700,000 members.

Pioneer Women's most visible local project is the Jewish phone book, published for the last 28 years. "It's part of the Ottawa scene," Mrs. Frankel says. "No Jewish home is without it." She says the phone book "raises a goodly sum of money."

Other activities, such as a program for the "spiritual adoption" of children in Israel, combine fund-raising with visible service. As an example, work is under way for a $3,000,000 Community Centre in Petach Tikvah, a community about 25 miles south of Tel Aviv. Canadian Pioneer Women supporters are footing the costs. Ottawa's specific contribution is a $10,000 playground.

Pioneer Women plays an active role on the local Canadian scene. They maintain close contact with Status of Women Activities and were among the few Jewish women's organizations to present a brief to the Minister of Health and Welfare on Pensions for Women.

Here is a more detailed breakdown of local Labour Zionist activities:

Labour Zionist Council
Chairman Harry Goldstein (729-1140) says the council acts as an umbrella organization for all Histadrut/Pioneer Women's activities. It takes an active role in political support for the Israeli Labour Party, and strives to maintain the ideals of the overall Labour Movement.

Histadrut League
Hugo Levendel (233-7867) acknowledges that Histadrut has a more historical than active role in the Ottawa community. But the organization's original idealism — and fund-raising capacity — has not died among its remaining members.

Pioneer Women's Council
President Freda Frankel (232-7306) says three groups, representing different age levels, co-ordinate community and Israel-support activities. These are:

Golda Meir Group — Sylvia Shinder, President (731-6745).

The longest established group, with many senior members;

Chana Szenes Group — Lana Coviensky, president (820-8750). Appeals to middle-aged women and is presently taking the leadership role locally.

Aviva Group — Carol Tradburks, President (828-7609). This group has attracted a core of young adults and is seeking even more supporters.

Members of the Degania Group are welcomed to general Pioneer Women's functions as "members at large," Mrs. Frankel said.

Among upcoming Pioneer Women functions is a "Nostalgia Night," scheduled for 8:00 p.m., November 15 at the Jewish Community Centre. All members and friends are invited to watch the Pioneer Women Players present "A Hanukah Geshichte."

Charlotte Slack (232-8877) can provide information about listings and purchases of the Jewish phone book.

Dror-Habonim

The Labour Movement's youth wing attracts 50 or more members to its regular Friday evening functions. These are held at the Histadrut Centre, 1547 Chatelain. "Maskira" (leader) of the group is Leah Steinberg (728-7048). Habonim co-ordinator Gad Banner can be reached at the Jewish Community Centre (232-7306).

Camp Geshet

This camp attracts Labour Zionist children from Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal. Some 120 children attend the sessions each summer.

Stamps mark centennial

The centennial of Zikhron Yaaqov and Mazkeret Batya two notable Israeli communities is celebrated on new stamps issued by the State of Israel.

Zikhron Yaaqov was one of the first colonies in all of Eretz Yisrael and the first on mountains of the Carmel which borders Samaria. Following the establishment of Israel, Zikhron became a center for surrounding communities. And the father of the colony, Baron de Rothschild, and his wife, were re-buried on a nearby hilltop. Mazkeret Batya was named after the Baron's mother, Batya.

For many years, Mazkeret was a typical farm settlement. But with independence came new settlers and multi-storied buildings. And what was a modest, isolated village grew into an urban suburb surrounded on all sides by new settlements.

As they evolved, both communities reflected the dynamism that is the modern state of Israel.

With the growth of Israel, came a concern for preserving its environment. Thus, the Council for a Beautiful Israel was organized. A new stamp has been issued to honor this body.

The Council devotes its efforts to improving beaches, preserving historic sites and public institutions, maintaining standards of attractiveness for schools community centers, even gasoline stations. The "Israel Beautiful" stamp is reproduced on another issue, which marks the National Stamp Exhibition held in Beer Sheva.

Beer Sheva, historically, has been known as an immigrant town. The first immigrants to arrive were refugees from the Cyprus detention camps in 1949. Today, Beer Sheva, with a population of some 130,000, is an important economic center for the Dead Sea works of Sedom, the chemical plants of Rotem and the modern chemical complex of Ramat Hovev, and the atomic energy research center near Dimona.

These latest stamps of Israel have a common thread which is progress in a land which was once barren.

Rabbi Basil Herring

Launches new book Nov. 14

In celebration of Jewish Book Month, and in recognition of a significant addition to the growing field of Medieval Jewish Studies, the Publications Committee of Congregation Beth Shalom is planning to hold a social and cultural evening on Sunday, November 14 to mark the recent publication of "Joseph Ibn Kaspi's Gevia Kesef: A Study in Medieval Jewish Philosophic Bible Commentary," by Rabbi Dr. Basil Herring, Rabbi of Ottawa's Congregation Beth Shalom.

The book, published under the imprimatur of Ktav Publishing House, a leading New York publisher of Judaica, provides a detailed exposition of the life, times, and literary output of Joseph Ibn Kaspi, a controversial 14th century Provencal writer. As a leading early disciple of Maimonides, he used Maimonides' philosophy and methods of interpreting the Bible.

Kaspi's works have only recently begun to be studied by Bible scholars, in the light of contemporary interest in Medieval French literature. A highlight of the book by Rabbi Herring is the fact that it incorporates a never-before published manuscript, with a translation and commentary, of Kaspi's Gevia Kesef, a commentary on the Torah.

Anyone in the community interested in attending the Book Launching, or in obtaining a copy of the book, may contact the Chairman of the Beth Shalom Publications Committee, Hy Roodman, at 722-0825, or Issie Landau at 733-5275.

High school students react to Holocaust

Bernie Farber, a member of the One Generation After group (O.G.A.) of the Jewish Community Council recently addressed an audience of 90 grade 12 and 13 history students at Merivale High School. O.G.A. was formed recently and is composed of children of survivors who meet regularly to discuss and act on issues of mutual interest.

Mr. Farber presented an account of the Holocaust based on firm historical incidents as seen through the eyes of a child of survivors.

The speech, which was scheduled to last one hour, extended to over twice that time due to the intense interest shown by the students.

Aliyah has new shaliach

The new Director for the Israel Aliyah Centre in Montreal is Aharon Korzen, a native of Toronto.

Mr. Korzen went to Israel in 1966 as a volunteer with Sherut La'am and continued doing volunteer work during the Six Day War. After the Six Day War, he returned to Canada for a short visit and went on aliyah in 1967.

He served with the Artillery Corps during the Yom Kippur War.

Born in Toronto, Mr. Korzen is a graduate of the Faculty of Law, Tel Aviv University, and holds an Advocate's Licence, Israel.

He has been a partner in a law firm in Natanya since 1979, and has worked with the Ministry of Commerce, Industry and Tourism in the Foreign Trade Division, and for a private investment company in the Tel Aviv area. As well, he has had extensive experience working with youth and was an English teacher in various schools in Israel for a period of 10 years before being called to the Israel Bar.

An active member of the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel and a member of the A.A.C.I. Legal Committee, he is a member of the International Bar Association Section on Business Law, an associate member of Canadian Bar Association and the New York Bar Association. He is also a founding member of Zeiri Zion Synagogue Community Centre, Natanya.

Aharon Korzen is married and has three children. His wife, Channa, is a high school teacher. She is active in klita (absorption) work in Natanya and has been the past chairperson of the Natanya English speaking group of "Emuna," a religious women's organization.

One young man commented, "I never knew any of this before, I really learned something today."

Another student queried "How do you feel when the Press calls what is happening in Lebanon a Genocide or Holocaust?"

Following the presentation the students expressed concern that the Holocaust was being on the one hand forgotten and on the other being overromanticized in film.

O.G.A. group members are committed to education and confrontation rather than avoidance and denial of a painful historical event. The group is open to anyone concerned with human rights, morality and Jewish Identity. For more information contact Noa Heilman, administrative assistance of the Jewish Community Council at 232-7306.

Visit Ottawa in the interest of Canada — Israel relations

By Hope Deimpsey

Representing a rapidly changing and industrialized view of Israel, the Israel Scene Caravan came to Ottawa October 24 and 25.

The travelling resource centre about Israel and Zionism was here as part of its third North American tour to bring a positive perspective of Israel.

"Israel is rapidly developing and is becoming increasingly industrialized," said Benjamin Rubin, co-director of the Caravan.

"The image of Israel which is usually presented is one of a poor, floundering country and it is important to see the other side."

In his address to more than 100 members of the Ottawa Jewish community, Mr. Rubin gave some statistics about Israel's industrial accomplishments.

"Israel is the world's second largest exporter of phosphates," said Mr. Rubin who is the editor of Israel Economist magazine.

"In 1980, 50 million dollars worth of industrial goods was exported to Canada alone. Of these goods, 3.7 million was in aircraft parts and 1.2 million in telecommunications parts."

During the Caravan's 60-day tour to 36 communities in Canada and the United States, members of the Caravan will be talking to groups in the general community about Israel and to Jewish communities about the possibilities of Aliyah. Members of the Caravan are former North Americans who have emigrated to Israel.

"We're on a 'good will' mission," said Charley Levine, Caravan director.

"We feel that Israel and Canada have a lot in common, such as our agricultural and technological accomplishments, our Judea-Christian values and our democratic frameworks."

"We came to explain the scientific progress of Israel, the 'brighter' side of life which we are proud of. We came to tell the 'unreported' story such as our 4.9 per cent unemployment rate and our accomplishments in the area of solar energy. Today 50 per cent of all hot water in Israel is heated by the sun," said Mr. Levine.

The Israel Scene Caravan which consists of films, audio visual programs, stand-up exhibits and printed material was presented to various groups in Ottawa during the Caravan's two-day visit.

While in Ottawa the group was widely received by Jewish youth and adult groups, the Jewish Students Union-Hillel at Carleton University and were interviewed on the Dean Tower and Hal Anthony shows.

The Caravan will return to North America in the spring with a different group of young people but the message will be the same: the industrialized view of Israel. The Caravan is sponsored in Canada by the World Zionist Organization Information Department and the Canadian Zionist Federation.

Health Fair

Other notable speakers scheduled to address the '82 Health and Fitness Fair are Dr. Pierre Turgeon who will be discussing "stress" in layman's terms and Dr. Jim Howe, Masters Runner and General Practitioner, and Diane Palmason, well known Women's Master Runner, speaking on "Fitness After 40", from both women's and men's perspectives.

The Fair is being held in cooperation with the Ottawa-Carleton Regional Health Unit.

Dr. Goldbloom will be speaking at 10 a.m. Dr. Pierre Turgeon will speak from 2-4 p.m., while Dr. Jim Howe and Diane Palmason will speak at 7 p.m.

For further information contact Ron Boro at the J.C.C., 232-7306.

Succot Young Israel Style

The joy of Succot was celebrated in the young Israel succah with games, skits, stories and refreshments. Over 80 children attended and took part in the festive party.

U.J.A. on bare bones budgets

Hakashruth is one of the less visible, but more important local Jewish organizations. The committee takes care to ensure that the standards of kashruth are met for butcher shops and community facilities and functions.

Committee chairman is Dr. Baruch Dina. Representation comes from the Synagogues and Sisterhoods, Rabbis, and other interested individuals. They perform a variety of ritual and educational functions. The Vaad Hakashruth does not require a large budget. Last year it was allocated only $6,170, but the funds were essential to its operation.

Hillel Lodge

The Ottawa Jewish Home for the Aged is to receive $21,000 from direct UJA funds this year. Lodge Executive Director Yale Greenberg says that money is essential to the level of care and comfort Hillel Lodge offers its residents.

"Without the money from the UJA, it would be difficult for Hillel Lodge to operate without dropping the quality of care to the residents," he said. That drop might affect little (but important) things such as offering tea and cookies after a social evening — or it could mean rooms would not be cleaned every day.

The demands on Hillel Lodge have increased every year, as the age of residents has increased, along with the sophistication and degree of care required. The lodge's 30 member board of directors has a major challenge on its hands, with its own fundraising campaign to reduce an accumulated debt. The UJA money remains a major source of revenue for Hillel Lodge operations.

Jewish Social Services Agency

Executive Director Elaine Rabin says the Jewish Social Services Agency has a major role to play in the Ottawa community — and the UJA funds are essential to support a wide range of services.

These include offering assistance and casework to families and individuals encountering difficulties in employment, accommodation, illness, domestic discord, aging and other circumstances which create problems of adjustment. The UJA also helps newcomers, including Soviet emigres, to settle.

Elderly persons benefit from telephone reassurance programs, Wheels-to-Meals lunches, friendly visiting, and a shopping service to enable those who cannot get out easily during the winter to make their purchases.

In addition, the JSSA provides Family Life Education programs and runs an on-going program twice a month for the newly retired and about-to-retire called "Adults for Lively Leisure."

While the agency receives support from a number of other sources, including the United Way, and relies heavily on volunteer support, the $20,000 it receives from UJA funds is essential to its operation.

Jewish Students Union-Hillel Foundation
The UJA and B'nai B'rith provide the bulk of the $30,000 budget for J.S.U.-Hillel operation at Ottawa universities, says coordinator Nissen Chackowicz. "Without the UJA and B'nai B'rith we wouldn't exist," he says. And an active Jewish students presence on campus has become increasingly important in the last year. UJA and B'nai B'rith support — along with the moral and political support of the entire community — helped the students in their recent fight at Ottawa University. Organizational and administrative support, indirectly funded by UJA through other agencies, has been vital to the students, Chackowicz says.

When not engaged in combating on-campus anti-semitism and anti-Zionism, JSU-Hillel conducts dances, sports events, cultural programs, community service projects and a range of other activities to give more meaning to Jewish students' lives.

Camp B'nai B'rith of Ottawa

Camp B'nai B'rith has come a long way in 38 years, from a few tents to a complex consisting of 34 bunk houses, special program rooms, a twenty-bed infirmary staffed by a doctor and nurse, a large gymnasium, a dining hall capable of feeding 500 people at one time...and more.

The camp is, in general, self-supporting but UJA funds are essential to pay a portion of the scholarship costs for campers who would not otherwise be able to attend. "It's important," says camp director Morley Mason.

Camp Gasher

The thriving camp, operated by the Dror Habonim Zionist Youth Movement, attracts some 130 campers each year from Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto. Director Gadi Banner says the camp emphasizes Jewish and Israeli themes through discussions, drama, music and workshops.

Other programs include hiking, nature, swimming, canoeing, water skiing and more. Hebrew is taught and spoken. The camp's educational program is planned by Israeli schlichim (messengers) who are from kibbutzim.

As with Camp B'nai B'rith, the UJA contributes part of the cost of camp scholarships.

Jewish Studies Program

The Judaic Studies Program at Carleton offers, within the Department of Religion, a wide range of credit courses from language instruction through graduate studies. Program director Professor Eugene Rothman says the UJA funds have a major supportive role to play. "The UJA enables us to maintain a viable and effective program on campus," he said.

The annual UJA grant is used to support research projects, innovative teaching programs and to encourage graduate students to move into the area of Jewish studies.

Academic Foundation

The Canada-Israel Foundation for Academic Exchanges works to encourage scholarly exchanges between Canada and Israel in areas such as history, political studies, social-economic analysis, Middle East studies and Law.

UJA support is essential, says academic director Eugene Rothman. "It's the basis for our exchange program. We wouldn't have the scholars otherwise."

This year's visiting Israeli scholar at Carleton University is Dr. Emmanuel Gutmann, a political scientist from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Arnell Goldberg

Simone Goldberg

Arnell & Simone Goldberg Endowment Fund Established

As a mark of tribute on his 50th birthday, Arnell Goldberg's partners and associates have established an Endowment Fund which will bear his name and that of his wife Simone in perpetuity.

The Arnell and Simone Goldberg Endowment Fund will be open-ended and family and friends may add to it at any time. The capital will be invested and the income used each year to further significant charitable causes in the Jewish community.

The Officers and Directors of the Foundation acknowledge its establishment and extend congratulations and best wishes to Mr. Goldberg on this milestone in his life.

The Hillel Academy Teachers Association would like to extend our heartfelt thanks to Carol and Howard Lithwick for their contribution to the Association. We appreciate their generosity, their support and their expression of confidence in the teachers.

Especially now, we must support Israel

By Jacob Neusner

Profound anguish at the tragedies unfolding in Lebanon moves idealistic and serious Jews to consider not giving money to the United Jewish Appeal and other Israeli causes. For instance, a young reporter for the Providence Journal, Alan Rosenberg, writes, "No, Israel, not this time..." He explains why he will not contribute to the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island this year. He stands for many — and not only in our small corner of the world.

Before I argue the case of massive support for Jewish federations and through them for the UJA and all other Israeli causes — at this time, especially — let me spell out my credentials. For I have earned the right to speak at this awful time and in just this contrary way.

I opposed the Six-Day War of 1967. With my wonderful mazel, my letter to the editor of the New York Times, declaring war needless, appeared on June 5, 1967.

When the Israelis shot down a civilian Libyan airliner in February, 1973, I compared their act to the Bulgarians' shooting down of an El Al plane.

I have always opposed creation of Jewish towns and villages on the West Bank/Samaria Judea. I said so in the Times on the op-ed page of Sept. 15, 1983, pointing out that such a policy would lead to war. It did, a couple of weeks later.

I wrote in Zionist magazines in the late '60s that an accommodation with the Arabs on Jerusalem was a small price to pay for peace.

When David Ben-Gurion said of the territories conquered in 1967, "Give them all back, in exchange for a meeting," I thought and said he was right. I mourned all the wars and all the people killed in them. I have paid the price. So today, perhaps, I may be believed.

When the Israeli war against the Palestine Liberation Organization in Lebanon broke out last June, I doubled my contribution to the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island. It was not to help pay for the war or even to signify approval. It was because of another set of issues entirely.

As a Jew, I believe there must be a Jewish state in the world for those for whom being Jewish is mainly political. As a Zionist, I believe that the State of Israel is the Jewish state. It is the completely legitimate and necessary consequence of the history of the Jewish people. I am a Zionist.

That does not mean I also must approve everything the State of Israel does or support to the last detail the least position of the most current elected official in the State of Israel. It does mean that I must oppose the things I think are wrong and support the things I think are right.

But whatever the Israelis do, my concern is unconditional. I can argue with my wife and yet the love endures. To my children, come what may, I remain, forever, father, and to my friends, comrade.

For what alternative do we Jews face? Before there was a State of Israel, the world regarded us as cowards, unable to sustain political life, incapable of loyalty and public service. We were known to be clever, but not courageous; people who cared for things, not for ideals. Today, for good or ill, we have a new set of faults. But no one thinks we are craven.

The State of Israel has shown the world other Jewish faces. Not all of them are my choice. But, for once, we have made them all. We act in history. We play some part in the affairs of nations.

For those millions of Jews not fortunate enough to be Americans, the State of Israel represents the sole hope for a normal and accepted position in a nation and within the life of nations. Should we give all that up, for them and for ourselves, because of what much of the world today perceives to be wrong and even needlessly destructive deeds? In the balance, never!

Because I cared, I criticized in what were, for us critics, very lonely times. Because I shall always care, I shall give still more today than ever in the past; to show that love is unconditional; that commitment, concern and caring count most when most tested.

I understand and respect those who hold the opposite view, who show disapproval by withdrawal. But for me, this is not the hour to desist, but to do — and to continue to state the fiercely held conviction that peace now is possible.

Dr. Jacob Neusner is professor of Judaic studies at Brown University.

Beth Shalom West to hold dance Nov. 20

Members of the community will have a chance to put on sneakers and dance to old memories when Beth Shalom West holds a "50's Dance" on Saturday, November 20 in the J.C.C. Gymnasium from 8:00 to 10:00 p.m.

Some lucky person will win a door prize, and a contest will be held to judge the best 50s costume. Refreshments will be available, including old-style sundaes. The music will be provided by a disc jockey.

This is the first social event of the year for Ottawa's newest synagogue.

Admission is $18.00 per couple if tickets are purchased in advance or $20.00 at the door. For further information or to obtain tickets, call Bonnie Merovitz at 820-2433.

Film Series begins at Young Israel Nov. 20

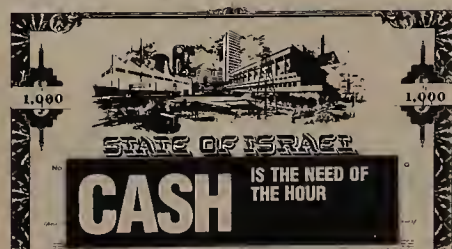

The initial presentation in the Young Israel of Ottawa Film Series is the poignant, much acclaimed Italian film "The Garden of the Finzi-Continis." It will be presented on Saturday night, November 20 at 8:00 p.m. at 627 Kirkwood Avenue.

The gradual, seemingly inexorable collapse of a Jewish family in the vortex of a rising fascism in pre-war Italy is the theme of this dreamlike and very beautiful film.

As part of the evening's presentation, Dr. Baruch Dina will discuss Jewish life in Italy on the eve of World War II.

Tickets to this evening which includes a soup-and-salad bar, are available from Dr. J. Caytak (729-9256). Cost is $6.00 per person.

the Women's Division

My Cabinet and I have reached the end of our regime, and it's my pleasure as my last task to recognize all the work done by my Cabinet, Canvassers, Professional Staff, and Contributors. I take great pride and pleasure in publicly thanking the wonderful group of ladies I've been associated with. We have worked hard as a cohesive force to educate, develop and unite every Jewish woman in the Ottawa Community to the needs, the values and the urgency of the Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal.

We Jews have a holy tradition of giving — giving of ourselves, our time and our money. Hand in hand with giving is the obligation for every Jewish woman to recognize and support the needs of Jewish institutions, social welfare agencies, the State of Israel and the needs of Jews in distress the world over. The ladies that we name on these pages have kept that tradition of giving alive. They care. They have given generously to the 1982 Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal. I publicly salute every one of these wonderful women for helping us realize our financial objective and the ultimate goal of keeping alive our Jewish heritage.

We regret no photo was available for B'nai B'rith Parliament Lodge.

This season the Jewish Men's Softball League expanded to twelve teams, and for the first time, two divisions. The change in format allowed for more competitive play in the "A" division, with the "B" division retaining the recreational flavour that has made the league popular for many years. While most league games were restricted to play within one or the other division, the schedule did allow for some inter-divisional play. Night softball at Carlington Park was introduced and drew many fans, as the caliber of ball generally improved in both divisions. The season, which extended until the end of August, saw Kiddie Kobbler capture the first Division "A" Championship, defeating defending champion Betcherman's in the fifth and deciding game of a close five game series. Baker-Met and B'nai Brith Ottawa Lodge also went five games, with the Lodge capturing the Division "B" flag. The season had many highlights, the greatest of which was the return to league play of Louis Honigman, a mainstay on the mound for many years. Many thanks to Murray Ages — convenor, for a job well done.

Program Update: Phys. Ed.

by Cindy Tyrlik
Asst. Phys. Ed. Director

Participation!

Greetings from the bottom floor of the J.C.C.! Harvey and I would like to give you an overview of what has been happening in the Phys. Ed. Department. If you've been down to the gym in the past month, you may have noticed that it was in the process of being made beautiful with a new floor and ceiling. This is a big job and by the time you read this article it will be a finished product. In the interim, we have been using the Social Hall and Assembly Hall and whatever we could get our hands on for our programs. Our biggest problem, however, has not been the gym floor, but the participation. To make our programs a success, we need you!

We have a number of successful programs which are in progress. Fitness classes throughout the day have had a good attendance. Fitness classes in the west with Doreen Keir and Rosie Lisogurski are very popular and are doing great! There is still a lot of room in Sunday Family Fitness and we would encourage you to come out and make this a successful and fun time. As well as these fitness programs, Barbie Allen Danersize is continuing and — great news — we have our own dance-exercise program here after school on Tuesday and Thursday afternoon. We have been encouraging mothers and daughters to come out.

If you've never really exercised and would like to start a personal program, we can get you started on the right track with a total fitness evaluation. Our fitness testing room is waiting for people to take advantage of it. Either Harvey or I will give you a total evaluation and start you on your own fitness program if you can't fit our classes into your schedule. The weight room and racquetball courts are open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Bring a friend and get fit!

Now that the gym is finished, recreational volleyball and badminton will begin, as well as the Wednesday night basketball league. The gym will also be open for free time when programs are not going on.

For boys, age 9-12 we offer "Boys' Night Out" at Briargreen Public School in the West-end, and of course floor hockey on Sundays — with over 70 participants.

We would really like to hear from you as to what you would like to get involved in, in the area of fitness, sport and recreation. The following is a brief list of up and coming winter programs.

First Aid
Judo
Skiing (downhill and cross-country)
Tennis
Swimming
Self-defence for women
Overweight program for women as well as the programs now going on. Any suggestions? We would enjoy hearing from you, and we are looking forward to seeing you in our new gymnasium!

2 programs well attended

'Anachnu'

The evening of October 17 brought eighty people together at the inaugural program of 'Anachnu'. The program which was a Wine and Cheese Party, was the first such event for those in the 24-35 age range.

There were single and married people in attendance, newcomers to the city and those who have lived in Ottawa from one year to a lifetime. All blended together in an evening of good social interaction, food and drink, music and dance and asserted merry making.

Future plans for Anachnu include a brunch, a party and a get-together with a Montreal group. For more information on activities call either Dave Bercussen 233-3226 or Ian Borer 232-7306.

Film Series

On Thursday, October 14, the J.C.C. Film Series showed the controversial film "Ticket to Heaven" at the Jewish Community Centre. An audience of approximately seventy-five people, young and old, watched this anti-cult movie. The story was shocking and disturbing to many and was a definite learning experience for those present.

At the conclusion of the film, Lawrence Greenspon, the chairman of the Cult Information Service fielded questions and responded to concerns and fears expressed by the viewing public. Mr. Greenspon had been invited by Chai Chapter of BBYO to speak to the youth, but he addressed not only the youth in attendance but also to the many parents in the audience.

All those who attended were glad they participated.

The second film in this year's series will be shown in January.

One Generation After groups feel Holocaust education vital

The One Generation After group is made up of children with a common bond: their parents survived the Holocaust, either in Europe or here. Toronto was recently the site of the first conference of One Generation After groups. On October 16 and 17 thirty people from Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa got together to discuss the roles, activities and future plans for these groups.

Ottawa was represented by Noa Heilman, Janet Kimmel, Kitty Hoffman, Linda Goldberg, Sam Newman and Andy Roberts.

After a get acquainted evening where everyone had a chance to warm up to each other, the business part of the conference got underway at the Holy Blossom Temple. A member of the host Toronto group read the Legacy of the Survivors of the Holocaust and Aba Beer, president of the National Holocaust Remembrance Committee, spoke of the role and task of the committee.

After the three groups gave reports on their current activities and what they wish to accomplish, the issues and concerns that had brought everyone together were raised. These topics were discussed in smaller task groups made up of members from the various cities. Some of the main concerns discussed were education, communication, follow-up and organization.

Education on the Holocaust was the most common element in the discussions. Everyone agreed there had to be some form of education of ourselves and of others, both Jews and non-Jews. It was heartening to see people from different cities sharing the same concerns and it was agreed that there should be more contact between cities so that ideas would be able to be exchanged.

Organization had become an important issue. It was felt that the objectives set out would best be carried out with the help and under the banner of the National Holocaust Remembrance Committee. As the last piece of business it was moved that The Generation After groups would now be part of the Holocaust Committee.

The next conference is scheduled to be held in Ottawa in February.

Aliyah-what are the advantages of absorption within a group?

First, the experience of previous settlers has shown that a group provides a social framework that facilitates absorption into a new country and society. The many problems that inevitably face newcomers to Israel can be solved more readily by joint group action and mutual assistance.

Secondly, a group can have far greater impact than an individual in effecting changes and determining the course of development of the particular community in which it settles. Settlement groups are made up of individuals with diverse educational, economic, social and religious backgrounds, but in the course of their pre-alia meetings, social contacts and exchange of views through their publications, a consensus on basic aims and directions is reached.

Finally, future settlers associated in these groups — garinim is the Hebrew term — get considerable help in preparing themselves for alia. Through meetings, publications, local and Israeli, and briefings on political and economic events, they are kept informed of what is going on in Israel today. Help is also given with the technical problems of resettlement: Getting passports and visas; making travel arrangements; transporting baggage and household effects; and deciding the all-important question of what goes into bags and boxes.

Garin Harif is a group of young adults planning to make alia together to kibbutz sometime between 1984 and 1986. The garin is currently made up of some 45 members, who are actively seeking new members before making a final decision as to specifically which kibbutz they will choose to settle.

Garin Ironi is a group of Habonim-Dror members who are planning to establish a permanent urban communal settlement within the pre-1967 borders of Israel. The group has strong ideological and organizational ties to the kibbutz movement, and is dedicated to the expression of chaluziut and socialist values in terms of the needs and realities of Israel in the 1980's and beyond. The garin is actively seeking new members and they are very interested in expanding prior to their alia in 1985-86.

Garin Harel was formed in 1978, and is comprised of dedicated socialist-zionists, who will be making alia to kibbutz Harel, a small, young kibbutz outside Jerusalem. The members of this garin range in age from 21-25. They plan to make alia in various stages through the end of 1983. Most members of the garin belong to Hashomer Hatzair, a non-religious worldwide Zionist youth movement, but the garin is anxious to be joined by non-movement people as well.

Garin Adamit is a group of idealistic, socialist-zionist 19-24 year olds. They plan to make alia to kibbutz Adamit, a young, activist community located on the Lebanese border, not far from Nahariya. The garin is interested in meeting people with common ideals and concerns, such as sexual equality, political activism, and Arab-Israeli relations. There are presently about 45 members in the garin, and they will be making alia in stages, from 1983-1985.

WHAT'S SPECIAL ABOUT THE ISRAEL SPECIAL FUND?

He is. His name is Avi.

Just a few months ago he was carrying his kid brother to bed on his shoulders. Now it's the kid brother who helps Avi into bed each night.

Avi's ambitions have not been disabled. He still dreams of becoming an engineer. Of committing his brains and sweat to the task of building a stronger Jewish nation.

Today he has a smaller, more immediate dream: of taking a single step.

With his will and courage, he'll take that first step — and soon. He'll be ready then to start realizing his larger dream. If there's a place for him in a university.

There may not be. The funds may not be there. Unless you help.

Your gift to the 1983 Israel Special Fund will help keep a place open for Avi.

There are thousands like Avi in Israel today. Not all of them have made the sacrifice he has. But they all share his determination to make their lives count in the Jewish future.

You can help make it possible for all of them to realize their dreams, both small and great.

Hillel Tea

The Women's Auxiliary of Hillel Lodge, under the sponsorship of Thelma Steinman and Pauline Dover, is preparing for its 17th Annual Fall Tea to take place at the Lodge, 125 Wurtemburg St., on Sunday, November 14, from 2:10 to 5 p.m.

Treasurer Freda Steinman is looking forward to filling her cash bowl since a good portion of the monies received will be used to replace much needed blankets and bed linens for the residents.

The Arts and Crafts division of the Lodge will be well represented with a display of handiwork for sale as Chanukah gifts for youngsters, oldsters and in-betweens.
Sadie Silverman, arrangements chairman, and her assistants, promise pleasing and palatable goodies to go with tea or coffee. Everyone is welcome.

Please note that the date is Sunday, November 14.

Seeking election as Trustee November 8

Abe Schwartz has announced that he will seek election to the Carleton Board of Education in the up-coming elections.

Mr. Schwartz has twice been elected President of the Parkwood Hills Home and School Association. Under his Presidency the Association has lobbied for a high-quality French language program at the secondary school level, for stronger parent input into Board deliberations and decisions, and continues to organize and finance many extra-curricular activities at the school.

On his own initiative, he has attended the bi-weekly Board of Education meetings and is concerned about several major issues, including, the closing of schools while neighboring schools are overcrowded, the lack of informal and open discussions between taxpayers and the School Board, and the fact that there is no Ombudsman to resolve problems that may arise between parents, or taxpayers, and the school system.

Mr. Schwartz, a Nepean resident for eleven years, says "As a parent and taxpayer I am concerned about these issues. As a Trustee I will be able to act upon them."
